Dear Shareholder,

The following is a brief summary of the tax consequences to Canadian resident shareholders (other than financial institutions) of Aldebaran Resources Inc. (“Aldebaran”) arising from the exchange of their existing shares of Aldebaran for new Aldebaran shares and the distribution of the shares of Centauri Minerals Inc. (“Centauri”) that took place on August 27, 2026, assuming that the shareholder dealt with Aldebaran on an arm’s-length basis and held their old Aldebaran shares as "capital property". This information is general only and should not be relied upon as formal tax advice.

- The distribution of Centauri shares is not a dividend for an Aldebaran shareholder.
- The distribution of the Centauri shares does not result in a capital gain to an Aldebaran shareholder unless the shareholder’s cost base of their old Aldebaran shares was less than $.10 per share at the time of the distribution.
- The cost base of the Centauri shares received on the distribution is equal to the "fair market value" of those shares on August 27, 2026.
- Based on the arm’s length, third party brokered financing completed shortly before the distribution, Centauri management has determined that CAD$1.00 is a reasonable price to use as the "fair market value" of the Centauri shares for the purpose of determining the cost base of those shares received on the distribution.
- The cost base of your new Aldebaran shares for Canadian tax purposes will be the cost base of your old Aldebaran shares less $.10 per share.

Example:

> A Canadian resident shareholder owned 10,000 Aldebaran shares with a cost base of $1.00 per share, or $10,000 in total. The shareholder would have received 10,000 "new” Aldebaran shares and 1,000 Centauri shares. The cost base for the Centauri shares will be $1,000 ($1.00 per share) and the cost for the new Aldebaran shares will be $9,000 ($0.90 per share).

For a more complete description of the tax consequences arising from the share exchange and Centauri share distribution, shareholders should refer to income tax section contained in the Management Information Circular of Aldebaran dated August 7, 2026 (the “Circular”) and prepared by the Company in connection with the spin-out transaction. A copy of this Circular can be found on SEDAR+ at www.sedarplus.ca, under Aldebaran’s profile. Shareholders are encouraged to read the entire tax section and to consult with their own tax advisors if they have any questions. The tax section also includes a section dealing with United States federal income tax considerations. Aldebaran shareholders who are subject to US income tax should refer to that section as well and consult with their own tax advisors.
